

WEALTHY CLUBMAN WANTED FOR ALLEGED INSULT

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of John B. Irwin, wealthy clubman and retired commission merchant.

Irwin is charged with having insulted Mrs. George W. Barrowman, of 1332 Granville avenue, a 19-year-old bride.

The warrant for the arrest of Irwin is the sequel to exciting scenes of yesterday.

Mrs. Barrowman says that Irwin accosted her on the street, and asked her to spend the afternoon with him. She passed on without replying. Irwin then followed her to her home, and hung around outside the door for an hour.

Mrs. Barrowman telephoned to her husband, and pointed out her annoyer. Barrowman followed Irwin. Irwin took refuge in the Chicago Athletic club.

Barrowman asked who Irwin was at the club. He was thrown out. Barrowman then complained to the police, and two detectives were sent to the club with him.

The detectives were refused admittance to the club on the ground that they "were not members," and Captain of Detectives John Halpin got peeved.

Halpin sent a squad of men to surround the club, and forced an entrance. After about two hours, Irwin was found in a bathtub.

"What is the meaning of this outrage?" he demanded.

"Aw, come on," said the detectives, "you're wanted."

Irwin went with the detectives, but when he told who he was, the police refused to hold him without a formal warrant. As all courts were closed, Barrowman had to wait until today.

Barrowman got the warrant from Judge Going today, and the police are now looking for Irwin. Barrowman and his pretty little bride say they will prosecute to the limit.

Mrs. John B. Irwin laughs at the charges against her clubman husband, and says they are preposterous. The members of the firm of J. B. Inderrieden, of which Irwin formerly was a director, are backing him up.

ARE TIRED OF TROUBLE.

Wheeling, W. Va., Sept. 13.—

Business and labor from all parts of the state are preparing an open letter to Gov. Glasscock demanding that something be done at once to put an end to the situation in the Kanawaha coal fields.

During the last two years, dozens of miners have been killed in the Kanawaha, thousands of dollars worth of mine property has been destroyed, and the entire district kept in turmoil.

Just now hundreds of state troops are in the field. They are costing the state $5,000 a day.

The open letter movement started in Wheeling, with the idea of forcing legislative action to control the mine owners.
